

San Leandro Creek Open House

Please join us at an informational Public Open House on Tuesday, Dec. 7, 2010, for the San Leandro Creek Hazardous Tree Project. The Open House will feature a variety of exhibit stations that will provide an overview of the project, the tree-risk rating system, the environmental review process, schedule, and information on the construction plans. Representatives of the Alameda County Flood Control and Water Conservation District (District) will staff the information stations and will be available to discuss the project and answer any questions.

The District helps protect Western Alameda County residents and properties from flooding while preserving the natural environment. The District is the dedicated steward of a vast flood protection infrastructure, which includes natural creeks, channels, pump stations, and other facilities.
